

FUNDING RESOURCES

Curated by Tanya Calamoneri

GETTING STARTED

When you are looking for money to support a project, organization, or for travel and research, make a list of every possible avenue of support. Who has a vested interest in seeing your project come to life or your organization thrive, or in you enhancing your knowledge of the field and increasing your network of contacts? A local bank, park association, or community group? Who are your constituents, and what contacts or resources do they have? Who will your project serve, and how can you get them involved in finding support for the project?

Below are links to some of the most extensive online funding databases and libraries that will help get you started in your search for financial support.

ONLINE RESOURCES:

The Arts Resource Network <http://www.artsresourcenetwork.org>

The Arts Resource Network provides tools and information to help artists, arts organizations and our community thrive. As a service of the Office of Arts & Cultural Affairs, this site is an extension of our artist, organization and community programs, including: jobs, grant opportunities, organizational development training, on line grantwriting classes and tips and more.

Foundation Center www.fdncenter.org

Founded in 1956, the Center is the nation's leading authority on philanthropy and is dedicated to serving grantseekers, grantmakers, researchers, policymakers, the media, and the general public.

The Foundation Center's mission is to strengthen the nonprofit sector by advancing knowledge about U.S. philanthropy.

To achieve our mission, we:

- * Collect, organize, and communicate information on U.S. philanthropy.
- * Conduct and facilitate research on trends in the field.
- * Provide education and training on the grantseeking process.
- * Ensure public access to information and services through our Web site, print and electronic publications, five library/learning centers, and a national network of Cooperating Collections.

On-line database of funding sources, for individuals or organizations. The Center's free classes and fee-based seminars are specifically designed for grantseekers—either representatives of nonprofit organizations or individuals—who want to enhance their understanding of the grantseeking process and various aspects of funding research. All classes are offered free of charge unless noted otherwise. Our fee-based training programs are day-long seminars and workshops.

Foundation Center for International Visitors is designed to help people visiting our Web site from countries outside the United States, and to help people seeking information on international grantmaking by U.S. foundations. The Foundation Center does not track information on charitable organizations located outside the U.S. Similar organizations to the Foundation Center exist in Canada, Europe, and in other locations, and we've gathered links to various other philanthropic organizations in our links to nonprofit resources.

International Federation of Arts Councils and Culture Agencies (IFACCA)

<http://www.ifacca.org/ifacca2/en/default.asp>

The International Federation of Arts Councils and Culture Agencies (IFACCA), the first global network of national arts funding bodies. Inaugurated in December 2000, our mission is to create an international resource and meeting ground for all those whose public responsibility it is to support excellence and diversity in artistic endeavor.

Internet Prospector <http://www.internet-prospector.org/>

Internet Prospector is a nonprofit service to the prospect research community, produced by volunteers nationwide who "mine" the Web for prospect research "nuggets." Although designed for nonprofit fundraisers, anyone seeking tools for accessing corporate, foundation, biographical, international, and online news sources will find this Web site useful. You'll find an online newsletter and an archive of past issues. A search engine is also provided, allowing you to quickly search for information from back issues located on the site. An option to subscribe to the free monthly newsletter is also available.

The fundamental objective of MMUF is to increase the number of minority students, and others with a demonstrated commitment to eradicating racial disparities, who will pursue PhDs in core fields in the arts and sciences. The program aims to reduce over time the serious underrepresentation on the faculties of individuals from certain minority groups, as well as to address the attendant educational consequences of these disparities. The program serves the related goals of structuring campus environments so that they will be more conducive to improved racial and ethnic relations, and of providing role models for all youth. MMUF aims to achieve its mission by identifying and supporting students of great promise and helping them to become scholars of the highest distinction.

Limitations: Research and writing grants to individuals to explore peace and cooperation issues and project support in areas of concern to the foundation.

Geographic Focus: National; international

Fields of interest: Africa; Brazil; India; International affairs; International exchange, students; International peace/security; Mexico; Population studies; Soviet Union (Former)

Types of support: Fellowships, Program development, Publication, Research

Applications: Contact foundation for current application deadline/guidelines; See program description for detailed application information.

Program Description:

1. Program on Peace and International Cooperation: Addresses four areas of interest: the links between U.S. foreign policy and domestic priorities; addressing the fundamental threat to world peace posed by production and trade of nuclear and conventional weapons; promoting international governance and civil society; and support for sustainable democracy in Central America. Individuals may receive grants through Research and Writing Grants for Individuals and the Regional Program of Postgraduate Fellowships in the Social Sciences, which is open only to citizens of Mexico and Central America initiating graduate studies outside their home country.

2. General Program: Supports independent documentary film- and video-making in the U.S. Grant awards for film and video production range from $50,000 to $300,000 and typically provide support for films intended for national or international broadcast. This program also gives other grants to projects that support the broad purposes of the foundation. Persons interested in learning whether the foundation might support a particular project should first submit a letter of inquiry explaining the problem or issue to be addressed, the project, and its relationship to the interests of the General Program and the foundation. The letter also should summarize the budget of the project and the nature of the organization for which funding is sought. In response to the letter, staff of the General Program will, if appropriate, request a full proposal. Such letters of inquiry and other requests for information should be sent to the foundation's Office of Grants Management, Research, and Information, 140 S. Dearborn St., Chicago, IL 60603.

3. Initiative in the Independent States of the Former Soviet Union: Supports research and unity projects that have practical application for policy-making and society. Eligible applicants are citizens and current residents in any of the states of the former Soviet Union. Applicants may be scholars, journalists, policy analysts, or other practitioners. Recipients receive funding for up to 18 months to cover stipends, research materials, research-related travel, publication subsidy, and equipment necessary for the project. Application forms and guidelines may be requested from the MacArthur Foundation's Chicago and Moscow offices. The annual deadline for applications is June 15. Awards are announced the following Mar.

4. Research and Writing Grants: Aims to support projects that explore the development of improved understanding of key topics of global security and sustainability, and to broaden and strengthen the community of writers and scholars engaged in work on these issues. Guidelines for the competition reflect specific themes that complement the grantmaking strategies of the foundation's Program on Global Security and Sustainability. For each annual competition conducted in 2002, 2003, and 2004, the foundation will only accept proposals relating to one of the following themes: "Migration and Refugees" or "Technological Change and Global Security and Sustainability." These grants support creative work in many academic disciplines and professions, as well as projects conducted outside of traditional disciplinary and professional approaches. Grants may be used by scholars in university and organizational settings or by independent researchers working outside of institutional contexts. Applicants of any age or citizenship may apply. Women, minorities, non-U.S. citizens, and younger scholars are particularly encouraged to apply. Grants are awarded for periods of eighteen months or less. Applicants may request up to $75,000 for individual projects, or up to $100,000 for two-person collaborations. Deadline Feb. 1.
